Provision of services

Your initial consultations are focused on assessing your personal needs and providing you with information so that you can make the right decisions about the treatment you receive. Consultations are carried out by our qualified dermatologists, doctors, personal practitioners and clinical technicians. Suitability for treatment and the patient's expectations are assessed and a comprehensive profile is built. Patients will be expected to sign a consent form and undertake a 'test patch' if necessary, once the procedure(s) have been fully explained. The patient can expect to be fully informed about the specific procedure(s) in question both verbally and in writing, with a summary of the consultation being provided for the patient to take home. Patients must provide a full medical history which includes information about any medication you are taking or confirmation if you have recently been exposed to the sun or UV light (e.g. sunbeds). This information is required so that our practitioners can assess suitability.
